For efficient working and smooth running of an organization it is important to see to the problems of the employees and also create a healthy environment with good working culture. KMI believes not only to recruit more and more staffs as per requirement but also to retain them for longer duration towards the betterment and success of the organization. Our organization has come up with lots of initiatives that are oriented to provide a better complaint redressal mechanism whenever any sort of grievances arises against the organization or against any staff.

Policy:

A complaint lodged verbally by an employee shall be treated as grievances. However, grievance shall be regarded as formed when the dissatisfaction is given in writing. Such disputes which are of a reasonable magnitude arising out of ill feeling by an employee or group of employees may be regarded as grievance. The feeling of injustice may be related to wages, mode of its payment, leave, transfer, positions, promotion, and treatment by superiors, interpretation of code of conduct.

The idea of framing the policy in KMI is to solve the problem and the complaints / concern raised by the employee. In this policy each and every employee has the right to express their grievance and there is a procedure to be followed. The policy has been formulated taking the following into consideration:

- 😊 Employees are treated fairly at all times.
- 😊 Complaints raised by employees are dealt with courtesy and on time.
- 😊 Employees are fully informed of avenues to escalate their complaints/ grievance within the organization and alternative remedy if they are not fully satisfied with the response to their complaints.
- 😊 All complaints are dealt efficiently and fairly.

In order to make the redressal mechanism more meaningful and effective, a structured system has been built in HR. This system would ensure that the redressal is fair and just within the given framework of rules and regulations so that the employees would be aware of the complaint handling process

Procedure: First stage

-  When an employee faces any grievance, they have to report it to their immediate superior. Such immediate superior officer is expected to give reply or find the solution to the grievance within the time stipulated according to the gravity of the grievance made.
-  If the matter is not settled or if the settlement made by them is not acceptable to the concerned employee, then the employee can directly contact the CHRO either through verbal communication or by submitting a written application in person or via mail.
-  The CHRO investigates on this matter with code of conduct committee and based on the findings it prepares a report to present before the director of the committee who takes decision with the help of the submitted report. If there is any ambiguity in the case a detailed investigation and proceeding for expert opinion would be considered.

2.8 Discipline and code of conduct

In any social system, irrespective of its nature, it is important to determine a set of rules that shall regulate the conduct of its members and should be observed to function successfully.

Similarly, it is important in the workplace to determine a set of rules to regulate the relationship between the employees and the employer in the form of a disciplinary procedure. The disciplinary procedure is regarded as a guideline and its interpretation is adequately flexible in order to adjust to various circumstances.

KMI follows its own disciplinary rules and code of conduct. If any employee is found violating the system, then they shall be liable for disciplinary action.

Each staff of KMI carries out the instructions given to them by the management and superiors, in connection with the organization diligently and faithfully.
